Upstairs... Grace, by Max Lucado, written in 12 chapters. Lessons in each chapter help expand our understanding of Grace. The 2nd section, by Kate Etue, is called a Reader's Guide. Each chapter has scripture and questions (could be personal use or family study. It was used in a previous Bible study session.)

Downstairs... (left side, top shelf/look for a white book)
Jesus The Friend of Children Each page has a Bible story of Jesus with a full page color illustration. A good read-aloud for our children.

From Pastor Doane...

In the sermon last Sunday, I told about 4-year-old Sebastian's comment when he watched me put in my hearing aids. Noticing his interest, I said "I'm putting on my ears." Bash responded, "Grandpa, you're different."

So, it caught my eye this morning when I saw an article by Chuck Swindoll titled; Jesus' Command: "Be Different!"

He's maybe my favorite preacher – at least in the top two. And I knew if I read on, the Spirit would challenge and encourage. He did. Here, see for yourself:

When Jesus walked the earth, He attracted a number of people to Himself. On one occasion, He sat down among them and taught them some bottom-line truths about how He wanted them to grow up.

The scriptural account of His "Sermon on the Mount" is found in Matthew 5, 6, and 7. If I were asked to suggest an overall theme of this grand sermon, it would be "Be different!"

Time and again, Jesus states the way things were among the religious types of their day, and then He instructs them to be different. For example:

Matthew 5:21-22: "You have heard . . . but I say to you . . ."

Matthew 5:27-28: "You have heard . . . but I say to you . . ."

Matthew 5:33-34: "Again, you have heard . . . but I say to you . . ."

Matthew 5:38-39: "You have heard . . . but I say to you . . ."

Matthew 5:43-44: "You have heard . . . but I say to you . . ."

Get the picture?

Then in Matthew 6, Jesus further explains how His listeners were to be different when they gave to the needy (6:2), and when they prayed (6:5), and when they fasted (6:16). The key verse in the entire sermon is, "So do not be like them . . ." (6:8).

You see, Jesus saw through all the pride and hypocrisy of others and was determined to instill in His disciples character traits of humility and authenticity. His unique teaching cut through the facade of religion like a sharp knife through warm butter. It remains to this day the most comprehensive delineation in all the New Testament of the Christian counterculture . . . offering a lifestyle totally at variance with the world system.

Are you willing to be different today?
